

PRIVACY POLICY

All personal information retained by Maples and Calder ("Maples and Calder", "we" or "us") will be kept confidential. Other than with our agents and service providers, we do not share your personal information with any person who is not affiliated with Maples and Calder.

When you send us your personal information, Maples and Calder and its affiliates will use your email address and other information to respond to your request for our legal guides or legal updates and to provide you with information regarding our client services. When you send us a copy of your resume or curriculum vitae, we will use the information contained therein to match you with any relevant opportunity that may arise within Maples and Calder and assess your application. Unless we obtain your permission, we will not use your email address and information for any other purpose.

We do not retain any more of your personal information than we believe is necessary for any of these purposes and we do not retain your personal information for any longer than is reasonably necessary to do so.

We have put procedures in place and take reasonable steps to ensure that your personal information is accurate, updated and secure.

As Maples and Calder is an international firm, your personal information may be transferred between our servers and offices. By sending us your personal information you consent to us making any necessary cross-border transfers of your personal information.

If you would like us to update or correct your personal information, or if you require details of the personal information relating to you which is retained by Maples and Calder, please email us at info@maplesandcalder.com and we will be happy to deal with any reasonable request.

If at any time you no longer wish to receive information from Maples and Calder and its affiliates you can advise us by return email. Maples and Calder reserves the right not to distribute, or discontinue distributing to, any person.

Maples and Calder